The International Journal of Data Analytics (IJDA) publishes the latest and high-quality research papers and methodologies in data analytics. It covers a wide range of fields including statistics, biostatistics, big data, artificial intelligence, business, economics and finance, biological science, medical and medicine research etc. Papers on statistics, biostatistics, econometrics, computational methodologies, and numerical simulations are especially welcome if they are immediately applicable to the journal's key topics of interest. The journal also welcomes research on big data in business today, including, but not limited to the applications of new big data technologies, data mining techniques, Internet commerce, and cloud computations. Paper authors will answer research questions such as: What are the data analytical problems? What are the appropriate strategies and algorithms used to solve them? How different are they from previous literatures? How effective are they? How do these ideas apply to problems in other related fields?
